Never pile things: vertical storage is the key

There are people who stack everything in piles, be it books, papers, or clothes. But this is a great waste. When it comes to storage, vertical is best. I am particularly obsessed with this point. I stored every item vertically if possible, including clothes, which I fold and stand on edge in my drawers, and stockings, which I rollup and stand in a box. The same is true for stationary and writing tools: whether boxes of staples, measuring tapes, or ~~the racers~~ erasers, I stand them on edge. ~~But~~ I even store my laptop in the bookcase as if it were indeed a notebook. If you have storage space that should be sufficient ~~to~~ but fall short, try standing things vertically. You'll find that this solves most problems.
