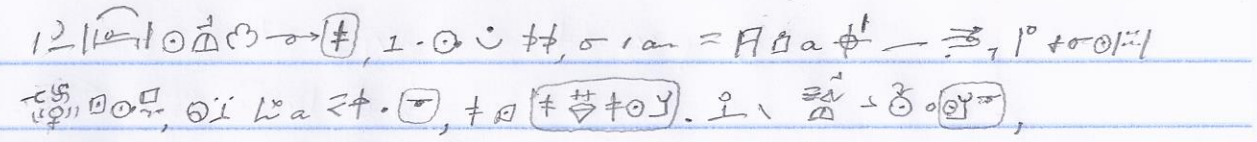
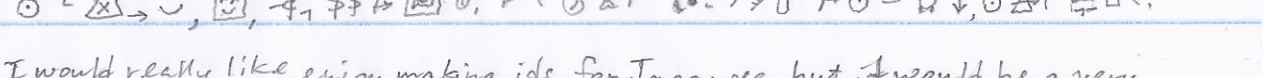
DEKIRU KAGIRI



Last night while lying in bed I thought about how "as" (as), one of my favorite ids, which is an = sign on a vertical line indicating degree + which I often animate in my mind, sometimes has a sense of "limit", as in "as hard as I can". Then it occurred to me that , "as I can" would be a good shorthand id.

Then I thought of the Japanese phrase "dekiru kagiri" (or dekiru dake) which means "to the extent of my ability" and what an extremely good id that would be to replace the Japanese "dekiru kagiri" (出来る限) 出来る (出 deru, go out / 来 kuru, come) + 限, kagiri, , a , , , and "dekiru kagiri" + , mi-watasu kagiri — .

出来る (出 deru, go out, 来 kuru, come) is very clumsy and 限, kagiri (limit), makes sense because 阝 is "hill", a kind of barrier or limit, but the right part, 艮, is "good", which makes no sense. Anyway, is excellent for "dekiru kagiri" + reminds me of the beautiful Japanese phrase "mi-watasu kagiri" — as far as the eye can see".



I would really like, enjoy, making ids for Japanese, but it would be a very dangerous rabbit hole for me to head down, I would become so absorbed in it.
