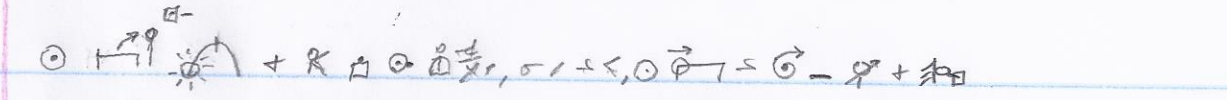
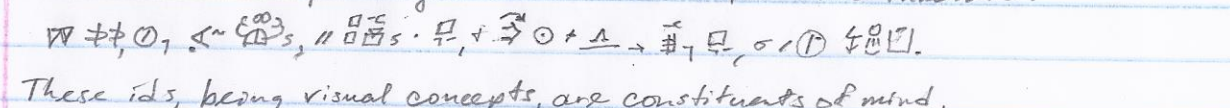
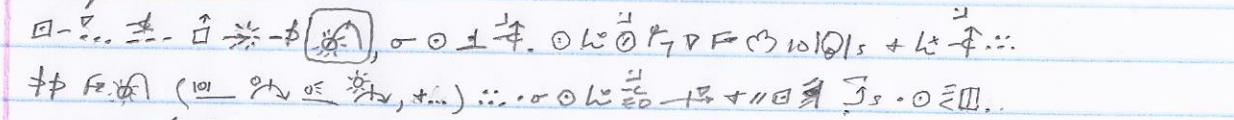
? ! Good morning!



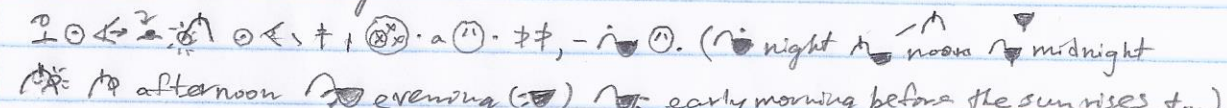
I get up in the morning and work on my ideograms, which is to say I begin to create — improve and innovate.



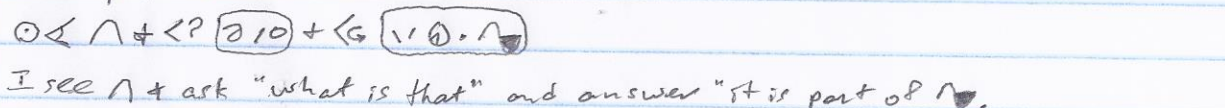
These ids, being visual concepts, are constituents of mind, and therefor I am constantly building mind, which is quite delightful.



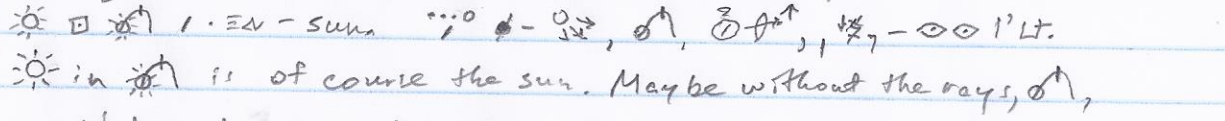
In the first sentence above appears the id , which I just made. I have been doing this for about 10 years and have made many ids for "morning" ( ) many of which I have thrown away and are in old versions of my dictionary. This new "morning" pleases me & I think it might be a "final solution".



When I look at I see it as a member of a family of ids, the day family (...).



I see & ask "what is that" and answer "it is part of ". " " "day". "Day " 24 hours or just the 12 or so light hours. clearly means the light hours & the whole 24 hour cycle.



in is of course the sun. Maybe without the rays, , would be clearer, not hurting the eyes so much.
