

AUTOMATIC, HAPPEN, NECESSARY, EXPERIENCE

 X: automatic is Greek, of course, "auto self and ina thing" getting away somewhat from the etymology, I use  "happen" and "self" plus the adjective indicator i, in this case standing for "ic" (the adjective indicator is very versatile + useful!)

BX: automatic / Greek, "ΞΑ", "B self + X thing - Δ7 → 00 ← Δ7, 0 P  "happen" + "self" + - Δ7 Δ7, Δ7 Δ7 Δ7 Δ7 (ic
 (- Δ7 Δ7 X, i, Δ7 + P* Δ7!)

Happen: , the bell curve, is chance → is "go by", a large "to" → (← from).  -to occur using the vehicle of chance. "Hap" is chance or luck, thus "happstance" + "happy".

But, since things don't happen merely by chance, but also by necessity,  ↔  make stricter sense. As Goethe said, "Das Gewebe dieser Welt ist aus Tucht und Notwendigkeit geworben" - The fabric of this world is woven out of Chance and Necessity.

: , chance, → "go by", a  → "to" (← from)

 -  P* - . "Hap"  ↔ , Δ7 happenstance + .

+, Δ7 X P* Δ7

 necessary, by the way, is a nice economical step away from the etymology [one not .cess code] - "not to be coded."

 must < adjective indic.  or  necessity "noun cap

This is similar to  able ( can)  ability.

 necessary,  →, a   →  ...

  →  able ...

An id I like, by the way, using  happen is , "experience" - that which happens to a person.

An   →,   , "experience" - o o  → a h.