Far Reaching Holistic Effects of Ordinary Word Reconceptualization.

[constructed script]

[constructed script]

[constructed script]

With ids I constantly do a lot of very fun reconceptualization, often trivial seeming because it is of insignificant common & structural words, but actually of far-reaching holistic effect.

[constructed script]

[constructed script]

Or if not so much holistic effect, then at least of very personal effect, since I am changing language according to my personal likes, taking control of it and making it mine.

[constructed script]   examples from just a few sentences
I just wrote in my diary:

→/←   to/from   [constructed script]

          If these are not simple structural words, what are?

          But I have never actually liked these ids that I made so quickly years ago.

[constructed script], [constructed script] for "to" & [constructed script] for "from"

Reconceptualizing recently, I came up with →·+·← for "to"
and ·→ + ←· for "from".

          [constructed script] Yesterday I went to work. Bring that book to me.

          [constructed script] The aliens came from a distant star.

          [constructed script] I am finished with my food; take it away from me.

[constructed script] diet [glyph] eat ⦂ list ‖ strict (samurai sword) ⊤ limit

↲→ look (atively see) ↲← look - appear ([glyph], ※

※ appear (※ poof) (out of nowhere) [glyph] disappear — poof! — into nowhere

[glyph] usual [glyph] use ⊙ most (often) vs. [glyph] usual ⋀ bell curve.

I. trivial I importance (pillar-like-ness) ([glyph] the etymid — 3 roads!
(I highly important)   I am glad to have escaped from this etymology!)

I[or] significant (or signal) I[n] insignificant.

[constructed script]

[constructed script]

I could give thousands of examples. And of course I have not at all lived up to the grandiose title, which calls for a very long essay or even a book, whereas
I have only provided a mere scrap.